II. Answer the following questions. Write not less than 45 words on each.

- What does job satisfaction mean to you?

Answer: For me, it means finding a job that aligns with my interests and skills, offers opportunities for growth and learning, and provides a sense of purpose and fulfillment. It also mean having a positive work environment, supportive colleagues and supervisors, and a fair compensation package. Ultimately, job satisfaction can lead to a happier and more fulfilling life both inside and outside of work.

- Do you think financial reward is more important than job stability or work–life balance?

Answer: I used to think that the amount of money I made was the most important thing about my job. But as I've gotten older, I've realized that having a healthy work-life balance is much more valuable to me. No amount of money can replace the time and experiences I get to enjoy with my loved ones, pursue my hobbies, and take care of my physical and mental health. So while financial rewards are still important, they're no longer the top priority in my career decisions.
